

The Coulee Region Humane Society is using the flooding from 3 years ago as an example as to why they have been searching for funds to get an emergency plan in place.

Director Heath Schmid says better communication and what to do when the power goes out at the humane society are two critical areas of their emergency plan.....which will now be funded by a $3800 grant given to them by the Lacrosse Community Foundation this week.

Seven other agencies also received grants from the La Crosse Community Foundation.
