

Police: Public Help Brought in Cemetery Vandals

Tuesday, 13 September 2011 11:28

The public's assistance has helped La Crosse police solve a crime from earlier this month. Cops had been looking for two thugs they suspected had broken up a big chunk of mausoleum marble in the Catholic cemetery. Behind the marble plate: the cremated remains of three people. The two were caught on a trail camera video strolling through the cemetery carrying tallboys of Keystone Ice at about the time the damage occurred. Police say numerous tips that came from the release of the video helped them track down the two young men.