

Since the Government Accountability Board decided to post recall petitions online Tuesday night, the GAB website has had over 54 thousand unique unique visitors to the site and over 1.2 million page hits....and it's growing. GAB Director, Kevin Kennedy, was asked if he thought the posting of petitions would be big.

In an online interview with Wisconsin Eye, Kennedy says it has not been a popular choice though with people concerned about privacy issues and they even fielded a call from the ACLU wanting more information about how they would post the petitions online.
