

By a 3-to-2 margin, voters in La Crosse are rejecting the idea of a city administrator.

With seven thousand votes counted, more than four thousand people had voted 'no' on the binding referendum. Opponents of the plan have argued that hiring an administrator would increase the size of city government and take away powers from the mayor.