

Statewide Drill Is A Go

Thursday, 19 April 2012 10:19

Many of you across the area will hear tornado sirens going off during the 1:00 p.m. hour today. Unless actual severe weather is happening somewhere in the state, it will only be a drill. Keith Butler of the local emergency management office says the alerts today are two-fold.

The state has planned a statewide tornado drill to run at 1:45pm today.....whiel people in Southeastern Wisconsin are expected to hear tornado sirens at about 1:20 p.m. If the National Weather Service has to issue an actual severe weather watch or warning, the statewide drill will happen Friday.