

Worried about weeds taking over your neighbor's yard? Thinking it's time somebody did something about that old mattress in the alley? Want to give an attaboy for the fine job city of La Crosse employees are doing on a daily basis? There's now a central place to do all of that. The city has a link on its website for you to "report a concern." It's a service that's apparently been available for months but, the planning department tells us, the community apparently didn't know about it. The "report a concern" site is a link on the sidebar of the city's website, listed under "Interest Items."
