

The push back against the growth of rental properties appears to be continuing in one La Crosse neighborhood. The city council next month is getting asked to consider new restrictions on rentals in the Washburn neighborhood. Just fine with Washburn neighborhood association president, Randy Magno

Earlier this year, the city council agreed to restricting new homes to single family only in Washburn except with special consideration. Now the council will be asked to approve limits on turning those single family homes into rentals and putting limits on the numbers of unrelated persons who can live in the homes.