

Possibly on the chopping block again for La Crosse: School crossing guards. Police could dump the service in an effort to deal with budget cuts of around two hundred thousand dollars in the coming year. City councilman Bob Seaquist hopes it never comes to that

The police proposed getting rid of crossing guards last year but kept them after resistance from the city council.