

When you don't want to pay rent, can you just say, 'no?' Shelby Youth Baseball essentially did. In a letter to the city of La Crosse, Shelby Ball leaders addressed the new five hundred dollar per year rent they were being asked to pay for a parking lot across from Shelby fields. City Public Works director Dale Hexom says numerous exchanges with Shelby has him convinced that they're not going to pay the rent that the city council approved last year. And since people at the fields will use the parking lot anyway, he's recommending to the council that they simply return to the original dollar per year rent deal.
