

Governor Scott Walker says his office will meet in a week or so with mental health and law enforcement experts, to see what types of mental health services need to be improved in the wake of mass shootings. U.S. Senator Tammy Baldwin likes the move.

\(Click for Audio\)

She said experts need to dig deeper, and provide mental health assistance for troubled individuals before they resort to violence. Talks she looks forward to on capitol hill.