

There's doubtless many voters who would love to hear much more about cutting taxes and fighting crime. But, so far, the biggest topic of conversation in the run for mayor of La Crosse has been one about neighborhood revitalization

\(Click for Audio\)

Mayoral candidate, Tim Kabat this week talked about his plans for so-called neighborhood partnership centers and service teams as ways to transform the city's most distressed properties. Doug Farmer has suggested utilizing money from a retiring TIF district as a way to rehab neighborhoods./