

Some things that city council candidates in one La Crosse race won't disagree on. Jessica Olson and David Krump are on next week's ballot, facing off for the district six council seat. Both acknowledge that neighborhood revitalization has become a big topic in this spring's city elections. Olson says that encouraging people to live in La Crosse is a necessity

\(Click for Audio\)

Agreed, says Krump, who says the city also needs to market the convenience of living in the city as opposed to living in the outlying areas

\(Click for Audio\)

The district six race is among three city council contests on the ballot next week that feature no incumbents.