

A delayed vote on economic development incentive standards for the city of La Crosse could occur as soon as next month. The city council considers a standards policy that would emphasize creating a uniform incentive practice, says council president Dick Swantz

\(Click for Audio\)

Swantz says a key part of the economic standards would have prospective developers proving that, without city help, a project wouldn't get done.