

Wash That Boat; Water Guard Watching

Friday, 02 July 2010 08:46

The water guard's out in abundance this week-end. The Wisconsin DNR is planning on having extra eyes at boat landings. They're looking for boats with hitch hiking plants. Plants that could help the spread of the deadly fish virus: VHS. Greg Stacy, head of the DNR's water guard, says just a little bleach in water sprayed on a boat's hull can kill any bits of VHS virus that might spread to other bodies of water in the state.
