

With a freshman class size at UW-L not seen since the 80's, doesn't seem as though the threat of doubling student loan interest rates by congress will have an effect on enrollments this year.

\(Click for Audio\)

Chancellor Joe Gow says it's a topic he and others on campus have had to answer this summer but he feels it hasn't been a deterrent for students to enroll this fall. He touched on the issue during his annual campus address Wednesday.