

Last week, the state presented more than a million dollars to Western Technical College to improve industrial training programs.

But one candidate for governor worries that too much money is being cut from education and training programs in Wisconsin. Democrat Mary Burke criticizes Governor Scott Walker for reductions in education and job training since he took office:

\(Click for Audio\)

(Speaking on WIZM's La Crosse Talk...) Burke says her jobs plan includes training efforts to make sure that workers are able to compete for the jobs of the future.