

A couple from Mondovi, who spent over three-fourths of their son's assets on themselves in 2007-and-'08, will be back in court next month to enter new pleas in the case.

51 year old Lori Nault and her husband Michael, are accused of misspending at least 167-thousand dollars owned by their son who was injured in Iraq. They had managed a guardianship account for Army Specialist Shane Nault, who was severely hurt in an explosion in Baghdad in 2007.

Prosecutors said the Naults gambled away at least 53-thousand dollars of their son's money at casinos
