

Today, John Lautz is basking in the glow of a big primary win. But the top vote getter in Wisconsin's 94th assembly Republican primary is also preparing to face his democratic opponent in next month's special general election. When asked about his strategy for campaigning against Steve Doyle, Lautz told us it doesn't matter who he runs against, his message is the same: work together to get the state fiscal house in order, balance the budget, and generate jobs in the 94th district.

Lautz says he was surprised when the final vote tallies had him so far ahead of the other primary candidates. He collected nearly 36 hundred votes, a total more than fifty percent higher than his next nearest competitor, Lynnetta Kopp.
