

If your shopping online today for the holiday's you should make sure your spam filters and anti-virus protection are up to date. And Sandy Chalmers of the consumer protection division in Wisconsin advises against typing in such things as "best deal" because that can lead to bogus websites out for credit card numbers.

She adds, shoppers should be wary of deals that look too good to be true.