

The only thing La Crosse has at stake with a vote tonight is the lack of peace and quiet late at night. The city council tonight is expected to agree to making a request of the feds to allow a nighttime quiet zone along the Burlington Northern railroad spur that runs through several southside neighborhoods to City Brewery. Should be a simple decision for the feds, says councilman Fran Formanek who lives next to the spur

Typically, the only time a train uses the spur is overnight.
