

New Bird Cam Coming

Wednesday, 14 March 2012 10:35

Over 270 million people combined have tuned in on the internet for the 2nd straight year to watch the Decorah eagles. People like eagles. They are strong, have powerful yellow beaks and are a national treasure. So when Bob Anderson, developer, decided to place a cam in a turkey vultures nest in Missouri....why does he think more people will watch them hatch eggs and raise their young than the eagles?

They won't be around for about a month though....the turkey vultures are still in South America.
