

Governor Scott Walker is blaming 17 state senators for putting politics before putting people back to work; costing our state thousands of jobs. In his weekly radio address, Walker said those actions led a mining company to pull out of the state, taking with them $1.5 billion and 2300 jobs. He says mining is what this state is all about.

Walker says it's a shame that 17 Senators refused to compromise and prevented thousands of jobs and over a billion dollars of investment. He also said he will call a special session if and when 17 state Senators are ready to set aside politics and pass a bill that ultimately leads to more Wisconsin jobs.
