

Boat Launch Permit Sales Exceed Expectations

Thursday, 22 March 2012 06:15

It's possible, the city of La Crosse parks department may have to go back to the printers to get more boat launch permits. Depends on how many they sell in the first year of the passes. But they're a hot commodity so far. Recreation supervisor Jay Odegaard says he's sold more than five hundred since the first of the year. Impressive, considering there was ice on the river until just a few weeks ago. We asked Odegaard if that's what he expected. Not really, he says

Odegaard expects a big push for the boat launch permits once spring is more than a couple days old.
