

A news 2010-11 report from UW-L's career fields department showed that about 88 percent found work within their major. The average salary of a UW-L graduate was about $41,300. Tim Tritch, associate director of Career Service, says that the numbers are slightly higher than reported two years ago.

Also, 98 percent of UW-La Crosse undergraduates seeking employment found work within six months of graduation. The results, based on around 900 surveys, do not include students who continued their education or those who were not seeking employment.