

The case of the underwater car with an open door could be a closed case very soon...

La Crosse police are wrapping up the investigation of why a Chevy Malibu was in the water at Pettibone Park last night. The car was hauled onto dry land with a door open, but nobody inside. Dive and rescue teams did a brief search in the water, for anyone who might have been in the car. Investigators think it may have been an empty car that was pushed into the water, or accidentally rolled in.
