

Koula Trial Begins With Jury Selection

Monday, 04 June 2012 08:06

More than two years after the shooting deaths of a Barre Mills couple, their son goes on trial in La Crosse this week.

Jury selection could last all day today in the Eric Koula case. Police and prosecutors believe Koula killed his parents in May of 2010 to get money to offset debts from stock trading. Eric Koula's attorneys claim evidence at the crime scene points to professional-style murders. The trial had been scheduled for last December, but delays in processing or reporting evidence led to two postponements of the case.
