

Not long now, there will be wide swath of land in downtown Holmen where several buildings used to be. The village has bought up the properties near Halfway Creek Park for a likely library. And the process of demolition is moving along, says village president Nancy Proctor

Although the plan for a village building definitely includes a library, there might be other uses for it as well. Those decisions, says Proctor, will be made by next spring.