

One of the keys towards developing a key piece of real estate in La Crosse has always been the clean-up.

Now that Exxon Mobil has begun the process of removing contaminated soil at the Mobil Oil site off of Copeland avenue, those development plans can really start moving forward.

But with deliberation, hopes city council president Audrey Kader.

Kader wants the 65 acre tract of land that includes the Mobil Oil site to be developed under one plan. There's not a clear picture of when the soil clean-up at the property will be complete.
