

Recall season is about to begin again in La Crosse. A group calling itself the Restore La Crosse Committee is turning in petitions today to begin a recall against city council president Audrey Kader. Kader typically has no problem winning elections in her district. But Greg Luce, with the recall group, says she's not going to have the same luck this time

The group's main gripe is what they claim is Kaders' leadership in trying to dissolve the council's committee of the whole, thus stifling the ability of the public to comment in front of the council. Kader says she has voted for that change only reluctantly. The mayor has vetoed the meeting change.
