

More Mental Health Treatment Needed

Wednesday, 02 January 2013 12:35

No matter what the mental health state the Connecticut shooter was in at the time he killed 20 children and six adults 2 weeks ago, one local mental health expert says just knowing there may have been some problems may open the door for some to get help.

\(Click for Audio\)

Don Kube (KUB-EE) says this country has experienced enough mass killings to demonstrate the need for change. He says we implore state and federal governments to provide more help, however expensive, to those with mental health issues. And more is needed.