

It took just hours for a La Crosse guy to get out of jail and then make a quick return. Cops say Jason Jones was arrested on Saturday on a domestic-related charge. They say the 30 year-old posted bond and was out of jail in minutes. It was bar time Sunday morning when they caught up to Jones again. Drinking downtown. He had his bond sheet in his pocket and an officer pointed out where the sheet clearly said, no alcohol and no bars. Jones said that provision didn't count because it wasn't highlighted in pink.
