

School Board members in Cashton could decide this afternoon whether to put a $12.3 million referendum on the April ballot. This after meeting on the topic earlier this week. Superintendent, Brad Saron, says it has quite a bit of community support.

\(Click for Audio\)

This would be the first referendum in Cashton since 1997.