

La Crosse Police Paid For Security at Downtown Bar

Monday, 18 March 2013 11:52

The La Crosse police department will get paid for some overtime hours it provided this week-end.. The Arena sports bar on third street, apparently expecting a little trouble, paid the La Crosse police department overtime costs for security on Friday and early Saturday morning for a rap concert. The bar got its money's worth. Cops dealt with a number of people, including a 25 year-old guy who tried to get on stage, got turned away by house security and the bashed the bouncer in the side of the head with a beer bottle. Very drunk, police say, the guy was also irritated about the money he was out in a cover charge for the show.
