

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) Minnesota revenue officials say problems with TurboTax and other Intuit tax preparation products have been fixed.

The Department of Revenue said Tuesday Intuit has corrected the errors and taxpayers can continue to use the company's products, which also include Lacerte, Intuit online and ProSeries.

Minnesota first became aware of problems with TurboTax and other Intuit products about three weeks ago when Intuit notified the department that it was holding back about 11,000 returns until the company could adapt the Minnesota tax-return software to recent federal tax law changes.

Revenue officials identified 13 issues with the various software products.
