

Tonight's is not the first dinner speech governor Walker has made since emerging on the national political scene two years ago. But it's one that seems more meaningful for some watching presidential politics. Walker speaks at the Robb Kelley fundraising dinner in Des Moines tonight. Which is a pretty big deal for president wannabees says Polk county democratic party chair, Tom Henderson

\(Click for Audio\)

Walker has made speeches at several other republican events around the nation and has a book deal to pen an autobiography about his fights against unions in Wisconsin. Many pundits see the confluence of those things as proof positive of a pending presidential run.