

Seems as though the rocky road to a new Justice Center in Monroe County has smoothed out a bit. Kurt Marshaus, project liaison manager for the $25 million Monroe County justice center project, says things are rolling right along.

Marshaus will oversee a project that includes a new jail, new courtrooms and new offices for the Clerk of Court and District Attorney. Tentative plans call for demolition and clearing of the site to begin in June, jail construction to begin in April 2014 and courthouse construction to begin in September 2014. Both buildings are expected to be ready for occupancy by January or February 2016.
