

A real scandal, or a witch hunt?

Minnesota Congressman Tim Walz thinks the public may be getting tired of scandals and investigations in Washington. But Democrat Walz says certain issues, such as the government checking the internet and phone calls, should be looked into, because at the end of any investigation that's dismissed as a "witch hunt," "there might be a witch." Walz tells us he has been concerned about excessive intrusions on personal property by both the Bush and Obama administrations.