A La Crosse County jury could hear from homicide suspect Cain Moss as soon as Wednesday...

The prosecution is expected to rest its case against Moss sometime on Wednesday, and the defense is likely to call him to the stand. Moss is accused of reckless homicide for providing drugs to Anthony DuCharme in 2011, and of trying to hide DuCharme's body after he died suddenly. Testimony began on Tuesday, with La Crosse police describing details of DuCharme's death and the discovery of his body on a hillside. One man previously convicted of helping conceal the corpse also took the witness stand, as did a man who served in the county jail with Moss and claims the defendant confessed to committing the crimes.
