

West Salem Superintendent, Troy Gunderson says he was glad to hear a lot of feedback from the community last week on what new buildings the district should build. Now and into the future. Gunderson tells us luckily they have the space for both.

\(Click for Audio\)

Feedback was taken about how the public felt on two building options. Gunderson hopes to have a referendum done in the books for the April elections.