

After almost 4 weeks, 19 year old Logan Goodell is back home. Home recovering after falling 45 feet from a bridge project near La Crosse. Goodell was installing concrete forms, when he plunged into a temporary enclosure. Goodell was originally going to be released tomorrow from Gundersen Health System in La Crosse. However, his departure was moved up by two days due to his fast recovery. Recently, an official of his employer, Ames Construction, said Goodell was working to rebuild his strength, and he's determined to make a full recovery. The mishap occurred on I-90 over the Mississippi River at the Wisconsin Minnesota border. The Gopher State's Occupational Safety and Health agency is investigating.
