

Counting and measuring zebra mussels may seem like an unexciting job...except on days when politicians and the news media take a tour of the lab:

\(Click for Audio\)

Workers at the U-S Geological Survey fish lab on French Island proceeded with their work, when Senator Tammy Baldwin went through the building on Friday. Baldwin visited the Environmental Sciences Center to learn more about what animals are threatening area waters:

\(Click for Audio\)

The Wisconsin Democrat says because the state is bordered by water on three sides, she has to be aware of the resources that state residents depend upon.