

Although overall traffic has increased on Minnesota's state-run healthcare exchange, enrollment has been pretty slow. A new report says 71 thousand used MNSure to apply for health coverage by the end of November. About 25 thousand have actually selected a plan. Just a fraction of those enrolling in a private plan. While thousands more around the state lose their coverage due to Obamacare changes. A train wreck, says Preston republican state rep, Greg Davids

\(Click for Audio\)

The state originally projected that more than a hundred thousand would find private insurance plans on the MNSure website.