

Quick Rescue From Ice on Sunday

Monday, 09 December 2013 11:14

A guy trapping beaver on the backwaters of the Mississippi could get out of the hospital today. Shelby fire department pulled the guy off the ice yesterday morning. The trapper fell through the ice, got himself out, and just yelled for help. The ice was thick enough for firefighters to put on their wetsuits, run out on the ice and grab the guy. They say he was okay but cold and a little incoherent. The rescue took just a few minutes.
