

Recall politics once again shows up in our list of top ten news stories this year. Our newsroom ranks the attempted recall of former La Crosse city council president Audrey Kader at the beginning of 2013 as the number eight story of the year. Turned out to be not much of a recall, says Kader

\(Click for Audio\)

The recall was organized by the Tea Party affiliated Restore La Crosse Committee. The group claimed that Kader wasn't supportive enough of former mayor Matt Harter and presided over a council that voted to eliminate a city council committee meeting.