

A double whammy may be on the way to the 40 million Target shoppers who's credit card numbers and info was hacked recently. Not only did those numbers get hacked, but be prepared for bogus emails from someone posing as your bank or Target to flood your inbox soon.

\(Click for Audio\)

Sandy Chalmers with the state's Consumer Protection Bureau in Madison says if you get a letter like this, contact your bank or Target first before clicking anything contained in the email.