

State Senator Kathleen Vinehout has made up her mind on a possible second run for Governor. Not gonna happen she says. In a statement sent to the media, Vinehout stated that after careful consideration she has decided not to run for Governor this year.

Vinehout says the severity of the injury she received in a car accident last month, a splintering of the bone in her upper right arm, and the time required to recover and rehabilitate make it impossible for her to run the intense, grass roots campaign that I want to run and would be necessary to win.

Vinehout says she wishes success to Democrat Mary Burke and others who may offer their time and talents in leading the state.
