Friday, 17 January 2014 09:23

It took 7 city, county and state agencies quite awhile to find a naked

Tomah man that was wandering around outside late Thursday afternoon. Around 4pm, cops were told that a nude man was seen walking in the snow near the Ocean Spray facility. Deputies located the man's tracks in the snow and confirmed the footprints showed he was in fact barefoot. They also followed a blood trail he had laid down. After a run through the local smokeshop, the man apparently took off down railroad tracks. After a half a mile, the man was found wandering along the Union Pacific Railroad tracks. Deputies provided liners from their coats and a face mask to help protect the subject until EMS could arrive. The man was taken to Tomah Memorial Hospital with life threatening injuries.
