

Car Ramming Apparently Escalation of Prior Stalking

A charge of stalking for a La Crosse man apparently should not have been his first. La Crosse police say the woman targeted by Erich Price as he rammed her car and several others Friday night says she had called police in the past about Price's stalking and harrassment. He had never been arrested. Things finally came to a head on Friday when Price used his car as a weapon and went after his ex-girlfriend's car and hit several others in a parking lot at a northside bar. A few injuries were reported afterwards, including a woman he apparently backed into and two guys that he bit while they were holding him waiting for police to arrive. Price faces a list of charges.
