

A city council committee has found it pretty easy to agree to allow a rezoning for the La Crosse county administrative center. Hard not to like an idea that involves the property turning into something the new owners will have to pay taxes on

\(Click for Audio\)

County administrator Steve O'Malley. He says rezoning by the city is an essential part of the county moving out of the building, into something new and developing the block-sized parking lot that the county owns downtown.