

No Good Drinking Goes Unpunished

Monday, 27 September 2010 11:38

You'd expect there to be more than a few public intoxication warnings during the Oktoberfest week-end in La Crosse. And there was, including the one that went to the woman who had no idea where she was, where she was staying, what month it is or who the president is. Her PBT: .28. Police are also still counting up the underage drinking tickets. Nearly forty so far. And, despite the typical Oktoberfest style of enforcement, there were still plenty of public consumption tickets and several for people who just couldn't quite locate a restroom.